WALES MUST GO TO COURT.

A Royal Flush to be shown in the Baccarat Scandal.

LONDON, May 4.—The trial of the baccarat scandal is expected to take place on the Saturday after the Derby, which will be run on May 27. The Lord Chief Justice has specially selected the case to try himself and already flooded with applications from social celebrities for admission to the court.

The Prince's appearance on the stand will be necessary, but it will only be a formality, and he will be asked only cut-and-dried questions.

The London season now being in full swing, I hear that Mrs. Wilson's reception socially has been in many quarters markedly cool. The Prince, however, supports her staunchly, knowing that the set made against her arises largely from jealousy of the distinction shown her by him on the part of other unsuccessful aspirants for admission to his special circle. Meanwhile Mrs. Wilson has decided to give no entertainment, pending a decision on the suit.

Russian Students Defy the Police.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 4.—The funeral today of Scheigounow, the well-known Russian political economist, was made the occasion of a great demonstration. The students of both sexes marched through the main thoroughfares in defiance of the police order prohibiting them from so doing. The latter having no suspicion that the students would venture to disobey the orders issued were not out along the line of march followed in sufficient force to stop them. The police, however, afterward arrested a large number of the students who had taken part in the demonstration, and several of them were afterwards dismissed from their schools and have been expelled from this city.

Reports have been received here that riotous and revolutionary meetings have been held at Warsaw, the capital of Russian Poland.

MURDERER! MURDERER!

THE CHARGE HURLED AT ONE OF FRANCE'S MINISTERS.

Wild Scene of Excitement in the Chamber of Deputies—The Soldiers Charged With Having Massacred the People at Fourmies.

PARIS, May 4.—It was announced yesterday that the A section of the left would demand a vote of censure against Constans, Minister of the Interior, on the ground that the latter was responsible for the slaughter of the men, women and children shot down by the troops at Fourmies on labor day.

Constans to-day, after replying in explanatory terms to a question as to the Fourmies affair and giving his version of the matter, holding that neither the Government nor the troops were to blame for the disaster, astonished to see M. Roche, the deputy representing the seventeenth electoral district of the Seine, spring to his feet and shout fiercely, "Murderer!"

A tremendous sensation followed. Members shouted and threatened each other. Finally order was restored and the chamber voted that Roche should be excluded from any further participation in to-day's session, and he should be declared censured by the chamber for the term he had applied to the Minister of the Interior.

No sooner was this course decided upon than M. Roche again sprang to his feet and, shaking his fist at those of his associates who had been most active in bringing about his expulsion and censure, the deputy yelled: "You are a lot of varlets worthy of your master!" The presiding officer ordered Roche to be removed by force from the chamber. This was finally done amid scenes of the wildest excitement ever witnessed in the Chamber of Deputies.

The excitement began with M. Dumay's interpellating the Government in regard to the Fourmies riot. He threw the entire blame for the trouble upon Minister Constans. M. Boyer, in supporting Dumay, commented upon the brutality of the official instructions. M. Roche said he had enquired into the cause of the riot and had found that immediately after a stone had been thrown, without summoning the people to disperse, the troops opened fire and continued firing for four minutes. There were more soldiers than people in the streets and the troops were made to act the part of butchers of women and children.

At this point vehement protests were raised and Roche was called to order. M. Constans denied the accuracy of Roche's statement. A mob of 4000, said the minister, received the soldiers with a shower of stones. One officer was knocked down and the rioters were on the point of forcing their way through the troops when the commander called upon them to keep back. The summons was unheeded and the commander ordered his men to fire into the crowd. This, however, had no effect and he ordered the soldiers to fire point blank. The soldiers obeyed and the result was the killing of seven persons and the wounding of fourteen. The soldiers, added the Minister, had a right to use their arms when in danger. The conduct of the army and the police throughout France on May day had checked serious disaster. Roche at this point cried, "Murderer!"

BURGLARS AT BRUSSELS.

They Hold Up a Young Man on the Street and Crack a Safe.

BRUSSELS, May 4.—The postoffice was burglarized this morning about 1.30. The thieves obtained an entrance by prying open the back door with heavy chisels, then bored a hole through the top of the safe and used powder to blow it open. A young man named D. McDonald was passing and was stopped by one of the burglars stationed outside. The fellow drew a revolver and presented it at McDonald's face and made him sit down on the doorstep outside while the other man was inside drilling and blowing the safe up. He remarked to McDonald that that was the way they made a living and that there would be an explosion in a few minutes, but it would not hurt him if he kept quiet. The explosion was heard by a great many. The burglars obtained $25, a gold watch and two registered letters.

A Burglary at Harriston.

The residence of A. C. Scarr was also entered but no loss sustained, owing to the thieves being frightened off.

(From another correspondent)
There is every prospect of a busy time here this spring as the drive on the river soon commences.

There are busy sowing, and every thing is in a beautiful state of refreshment.

The annual meeting of the C. M. church was held last Monday evening. During the last meeting until next winter, all the members took an active part in the programme, and made it a grand success.

The public school children celebrated Arbor day by cleaning the school yard and making it beautiful by the arrangement of tastily designed flower-beds.

One by one, the old pioneers are passing away. At seven o'clock Sunday morning, the spirit of Thomas Mabey returned to the God who gave it. Mr. Mabey was about sixty five years of age, and has lived here the greater portion of his lifetime. He was of a quiet, unassuming disposition and this coupled with a genial good nature won for him the favor and esteem of all. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss, namely: Dr. J. E. Mabey, of Odessa; Dr. Oscar Mabey, of New Providence, Iowa; Mr. Judson Mabey, of Nepegon; and Mrs. Philip Stover, of Ernestown. He was an earnest and consistent member of the Methodist church, and in politics a lifelong Reformer. The funeral ceremonies were conducted by Rev. W. G. Young, and the body taken to Cataragui for interment.

Still the "Death Roll" increases and other homes are made desolate through the loss of friends. On Saturday Arminthia Hartman, the beloved wife of Thos. Burt, passed away after a painful and lingering illness. She was a woman of noble character, beloved by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. She leaves three little children who will sadly miss a gentle mother's care. The body was buried in the Morven cemetery.

The township fathers held a special session of the council on Monday evening.

Wilton.

Sabbath school was organized last Sunday. Quarterly meeting next Sunday morning. We have had quite a little snow storm, hope it will bring some warmer weather.

If the young men, beg pardon, boys, who are in the habit of tripping lightly out of church, would kindly favor us with their company until the close of the services, both the ministers and the congregation would be deeply indebted to them. And as for having to leave the evening service to drive up and down Main street, there is plenty of time after church.

Stella.

Hello there, Mr. Editor! What's been wrong with Stella lately? We seldom see what we are doing through the EXPRESS.

Well this is a breeze of a day—blowing to beat the village band. Not a lady to be seen on the streets to-day; they probably have not time to put a double reef in to-day, which is certainly necessary in order to ensure a safe trip.

Housecleaning finished on Sunday, and many a husband looks to-day as if he had washed a thing or two in his visit to Nanapan.

The warm rain of Sunday has much improved the look of growing crops.

spring to his feet and, shaking his fist at those of his associates who had been most active in bringing about his expulsion and censure, the deputy yelled: "You are a lot of varlets worthy of your master!" The presiding officer ordered Roche to be removed by force from the chamber. This was finally done amid scenes of the wildest excitement ever witnessed in the Chamber of Deputies.

The excitement began with M. Dumay's interpellating the Government in regard to the Fourmies riot. He threw the entire blame for the trouble upon Minister Constant. M. Boyer, in supporting Dumay, commented upon the brutality of the official instructions. M. Roche said he had enquired into the cause of the riot and had found that immediately after a stone had been thrown, without summoning the people to disperse, the troops opened fire and continued firing for four minutes. There were more soldiers than people in the streets and the troops were made to act the part of butchers of women and children.

At this point vehement protests were raised and Roche was called to order. M. Constant denied the accuracy of Roche's statement. A mob of 4000, said the minister, received the soldiers with a shower of stones. One officer was knocked down and the rioters were on the point of forcing their way through the troops when the commander called upon them to keep back. The summons was unheeded and the commander ordered his men to fire into the crowd. This, however, had no effect and he ordered the soldiers to fire point blank. The soldiers obeyed and the result was the killing of seven persons and the wounding of fourteen. The soldiers, added the Minister, had a right to use their arms when in danger. The conduct of the army and the police throughout France on May day had checked serious disaster.

Roche at this point cried, "Murderer!"

A number of members protested against Roche's language, and the president ordered that the offender be temporarily expelled. Quiet having been restored, M. Millet demanded that a committee be appointed enquire into the Fourmies riot.

M. DeFreycinet, Premier and Minister of War, opposed the motion. "I said," he said, "Government was not in a position to put a barrier to the social and political classes operating with Parliament of the working classes. Leraud's motion was rejected by the Chamber by a resolution declaring the Government's policy."

Arms and Dynamite to be Used Again the Troops—Funeral of the Victims.

FOURMIES, France, May 4.—The situation here to-day is one of great gravity and induces the Government to postpone the funerals of the men, women and children who were killed by the troops on labor day. The greatest excitement prevails throughout this town and in the villages in its vicinity. Many of the leaders of the labor party have started for Belgium to collect arms and dynamite for use against the troops stationed here, and especially against the infantry regiment, which used its rifles with such fatal effect upon the populace on Friday last. The report has reached here that 300 kilograms of dynamite destined for the people of this town has been seized while being smuggled across the frontier from Belgium.

Cavalry pickets will be stationed all along the route of the funeral procession of the victims of the May-day massacre, for such is the term applied to the tragedy by the people of Fourmies. The cavalry along the route will receive instructions to act promptly and effectively in the event of trouble. The Government has sent two details here with instructions to make a thorough inquiry into the causes which led to the disturbances on labor day and into the action of the subprefect who ordered the troops to fire upon the people.

The funeral procession this afternoon was very long, being participated in by a large number of workmen's clubs. The nine coffins were surrounded by the relatives of the victims. After the religious services the clergy left and the Socialists then took charge, some violent addresses being delivered. Many women carrying banners placed wreaths upon the graves. The troops keeping order in the streets shouldered arms while the coffins were passing.

BRUSSELS, May 4.—The postoffice was burglarized this morning about 1.30. The thieves obtained an entrance by prying open the back door with heavy chisels, then bored a hole through the top of the safe and used powder to blow it open. A young man named D. McDonald was passing and was stopped by one of the burglars stationed outside. The fellow drew a revolver and presented it at McDonald's face and made him sit down on the doorstep outside while the other man was inside drilling and blowing the safe up. He remarked to McDonald that that was the way they made a living and that there would be an explosion in a few minutes, but it would not hurt him if he kept quiet. The explosion was heard by a great many. The burglars obtained $25, a gold watch and two registered letters.

A Burglary at Harriston.

HARRISTON, May 4.—The drygoods store of Wilson & Pyle of this town was broken into by thieves about 3 o'clock this morning, and goods consisting of kid gloves, silk gloves, cashmere, hosiery, ties, etc. were stolen to the amount of $300. The residence of A. C. Scarr was also entered but no loss sustained, owing to the thieves being frightened off.

BRIDGEWATER, Conn., May 4.—Oliver H. Jessup, one of the most prominent citizens of the town, conceived the idea that he was a second Abraham and that the Lord required a human sacrifice. Her hopes are entertained for the recovery of Mrs. Conn, though her injuries are very severe.

Contemplated Self Destruction.

L'ORIGINAL, May 4.—A startling discovery was made yesterday by Mr. Cameron, the jailer here. In the cell of the condemned murderer Larocque was found a blade of a penknife, sharpened to an edge as sharp as a razor's, which was concealed under the mattress of his bed. He eats heartily and sleeps well, and seems little disturbed by the prospect of his approaching death on the scaffold.

One by one, the old pioneers are passing away. At seven o'clock Sunday morning, the spirit of Thomas Mabee returned to the God who gave it. Mr. Mabee was about sixty five years of age, and has lived here the greater portion of his lifetime. He was a quiet, unassuming disposition and this coupled with a genial good nature won for him the favor and esteem of all. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his loss, namely: Dr. J. E. Mabee, of Odessa; Dr. Oscar Mabee, of New Providence, Iowa; Mr. Judson Mabee, of Nepean; and Mrs. Philip Stover, of Ernestown. He was an earnest and consistent member of the Methodist church, and in politics a lifelong Reformer. The funeral ceremonies were conducted by Rev. W. G. Young, and the body taken to Cataract for interment.

Still the "Death Roll" increases and other homes are made desolate through the loss of friends. On Saturday Armintha Hartman, the beloved wife of Thos. She leaves three little children who will sadly miss a gentle mother's care. The body was buried in the Morven cemetery.

ation E. G. Ravenstein produced an elaborate set of statistics to show that the world will, in the ordinary course of things, be fully inhabited in about 182 years, which estimate considerably extends the period at which some learned men believe humanity
 will be crowded out.
 Having previously swept away the arctic
 and antarctic regions as not being essential for his argument, he parceled out the remainder of the earth into: Cultivable land, 28,469,000 square miles; steppe, scrub, poor grass, etc., 13,901,000 square miles; barren deserts, 4,180,000 square miles; a total of 46, 350,000 square miles. The population living upon this he reckons at a little over 1,467, 000,000, divided thus: Europe, 330,200,000; Asia, 850,000,000; Africa, 127,000,000 (a much lower estimate than most people compute);
 Australia, 4,780,000; North America, 89,250,
 000; South America, 36,500,000.
 Mr. Ravenstein showed how, supposing the standard of life among the various people to remain the same, supposing the population increases at the rate of 8 per cent in every decade, and supposing there are no extraordinary improvements in agriculture, the population of the world in the year 2072 will be 5,994,000,000. In speaking of the populations of these areas would bear (mentioning 207 individuals to the square mile as a fair average), he suggested that the productiveness of the earth might be better utilized when people under-

pushed his way forward.
 "Mister," he questioned, "may I take a squirt at them' keerdles?"
 "Certainly," replied the professional, as he handed them over. The countryman inspected them suspiciously, and then, apparently satisfied, returned them, but did not take the bet.
 "The cards are all right, aren't they?" the professional asked.
 "Ya'as," the countryman said, hesitatingly.
 "Why don't you take my bet then?"
 "Well, I don't know; I ain't much of a betting man."
 The professional saw that the countryman
 was more than half inclined to take him up,
 and, to make sure of his game, he said:
 "Come, I'll bet 10s. to 5s., 15s. to 5s., 21
 to 5s."
 "Hanged if I don't take ye," exclaimed
 the countryman after a moment's hesitation; and diving into his pocket he drew out a strip of calico (apparently a sample to show his girl), some cheese, a plug of tobacco, several horseshoe nails, and, lastly, a dyspeptic-looking leather purse, from which he extracted two half crowns, from which he placed in the hand of a bystander. The professional speedily covered the deposit with a bright sovereign, and

AGENT—NAPANEE

If some men had the nine lives of a cat
 they would waste them all in folly and have nine deathbed repentances.

WHY NOT TREAT? Why not treat such troubles as boils, pimples, blotches, sores,
 humors, eruptions, rashes, skin irritations, etc., with Burdock Blood Bitters. It is called the virtue as a blood purifier and goes right to the right spot. It makes the skin bright and clear, while also invigorating the entire system.

"He can trace his ancestry back to the flood." "O, pahaw, everybody was in the swim then."

SPRING CLEANING. Be particular every Spring to clean the house, but never mind cleaning the blood until some troublesome disease takes hold of you. This is a poor policy when by using Burdock Blood Bitters the blood can be thoroughly cleansed, the body strengthened,
 and further suffering prevented.

"Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Jones met at our house to compare babies this morning."
 "Which was the best?" "Well, when I left they were both holding their own."

HOLD IT TO THE LIGHT. The man who tells you confidently just what will cure your cold is presenting Kemp's Balsam this year. In the preparation of this remarkable medicine for coughs and colds no expense is spared to combine only the purest and purest ingredients. Hold a bottle of Kemp's Balsam to the light and look through it; notice the bright, clear look, and compare with other medicines. Price 50c and $1.

Watt—Wonder why they always call a locomotive "she?" Potts—Maybe it is on account of the horrible noise it makes when it tries to whistle.

SIT DOWN AND THINK.—SIT DOWN and
 think; sit, that dyspepsia is caused by weak-action of the stomach; and that Burdock Blood Bitters is designed to correct and regulate the stomach; and that it always cures dyspepsia and restores to a content a dose. Can you afford to be dyspeptic?

The Uncertainty of it—Clergyman—Ah,
 my friend, why don't you lay up treasures
 for yourself in heaven? Business Man—Because I'm not sure that I'll ever get there to claim them.

A SPRING MEDICINE. There are few who do not at this season feel the need of a Spring medicine, and to all such we recommend Lane's Family Medicine as the best. This is a splendid herb drink made by pouring boiling water over the dried roots and herbs. Druggists sell the packages at 50c and $1. It is the best as well as the pleasantest cure for constipation and headache.

Both Satisfied—Miss Spinney—For my part
 I believe in a single blessedness. Mrs. Wedde-
 —So do I, too; since my husband and I were made one.

SUPPOSING. Supposing you suffer from one disease. Suppose it is dyspepsia or biliousness or constipation or bad blood. Suppose you learn that Burdock Blood Bitters

The Manchester Ship Canal.

The Manchester ship canal will not be completed within the time or for the amount originally estimated. The company has applied to the corporation of Manchester for financial assistance, its own borrowing powers under the Act of incorporation being exhausted, and a report of the matter has been prepared by a committee appointed by the city. The committee has made careful investigations, and has considered reports submitted by its own engineers and by the canal officials.
 Up to the end of 1890 over $45,000,000 had been spent; while about $20,000,000 more are required, making a total of $65,000,000, against the original estimate of $46,000,000.
 Unless substantial assistance is promptly
 given, the works must stop, as the present funds will only last for a few months, and the company has been unable to get the public to subscribe for $2,000,000 of debentures.

Another Canadian Mineral Find.

In the latest mining news from British Columbia is reported the discovery of a large bed of auriferous gravel in the Cariboo district. It runs parallel with the Canal river for about ten miles, and every linear foot has produced the value of $1. Several hydraulic mining companies are now working it, and the find is considered one of the most important made in many years. Quartz mining in Cariboo is greatly handicapped by the absence of railway facilities, and practical men say that a road through the Yellow Head pass is absolutely necessary for the development of the district, and could not help proving a paying investment to its pro-motors.

Electricity for the Mosquito.

Wire netting, as ordinary mosquito netting, and attached to an electric battery, is an invention for entrapping the Jersey stork, yclept the mosquito. The netting hangs in folds around the bed or crib, and the occupant can enjoy an hour's sport by lighting a lamp and waiting attack. The stork, attracted by the lamp, will soon alight on the canopy. The invention consists of pressing a button and turning on the fatal electric shock.

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, MAY 8, 1891.

The most exciting feature of the winding up of the sittings of the Ontario Legislature was the motion to increase the sum annually paid Mr. Mowat and Mr. Meredith, the one as leader of the Government and the other as leader of the Opposition. There are some very good reasons why both these gentlemen should receive larger pay for their eminent services, and then again there are some other excellent reasons why they should not. The pay of members of the Legislature was some years ago increased and there was a big storm all over the Province in consequence, and the members had to reduce the salaries again to the old figure. However much it may be fitting to increase Mr. Mowat's and Mr. Meredith's salaries;

in his bill the piper is generally the person.

VERY MANY SUCH FRIENDS.—What sort of a fellow is he? "He's a friend who would be willing to share your last dollar with you."

LONDON, May 4.—Lord Kimberley in the House of Lords moved that in view of assurances given the Government from the Newfoundland delegates that the colony would immediately pass an act which would provide for the due enforcement of the treaty stipulations existing between France and Great Britain the House ought not to go into committee on the Knutsford Coercive Bill until reasonable time had been given to Newfoundland to pass the necessary legislation.
 Lord Kimberley also urged that the colonial legislature would not repudiate the promises of delegates and that therefore the Knutsford bill ought not to be carried any farther.
 Lord Knutsford refused to accede to Kim-berley's motion, claiming that the New foundland question had an Imperial character
 which must be recognized in dealing with it.
 Knutsford added, however, that if Newfoundland would pass the promised measure
 the bill at present before the House would be dropped.

Lord Dunraven said he regretted the Government could not agree to abandon the Knutsford Bill, as it seemed the Newfound-landers were honestly determined to do all in their power to avoid the necessity of any coercive measures.

Lord Herschell, one of the deputy speakers in the House of Lords, said it was in connection with the colonies
 that the bill was introduced.

Wholesale Evictions Reported From Wexford.

LONDON, May 4.—Lord Kimberley in the House of Lords moved that in view of assurances given the Government from the Newfoundland delegates that this colony would immediately pass an act which would provide for the due enforcement of the treaty stipulations existing between France and Great Britain the House ought not to go into committee on the Knutsford Cove Bill until reasonable time had been given to Newfoundland to pass the necessary legislation. Lord Kimberley also urged that the colonial legislature would not repudiate the promises of delegates and that therefore the Knutsford Bill ought not to be carried any farther. Lord Knutsford refused to accede to Kimberley's motion, claiming that the Newfoundland question had an Imperial character which must be recognized in dealing with it. Knutsford added, however, that if Newfoundland would pass the promised measure the bill at present before the House would be dropped.

Lord Dunraven said he regretted the Government could not agree to abandon the Knutsford Bill, as it seemed the Newfoundlanders were honestly determined to do all in their power to avoid the necessity of any coercive measures.

Mr. Herschell, one of the deputy speakers of the House of Lords, said it was in connection with the colonists' bill that act by the Newfoundland Legislature to enforce the measures which the Knutsford bill was designed to carry out. After further discussion Lord Kimberley's motion was rejected by 113 to 30.

Lord Herschell moved that the Knutsford Bill be dropped.

Lady Dysart's Divorces.
LONDON, May 4.—Lady Dysart has just paid her second call at the Divorce Court, this time on her own account. A few years ago she was divorced by the Earl of Dysart for a guilty intrigue with an actor named Sugden. She married Sugden and now has obtained a decree against him for desertion and adultery. Most people think she has been deservedly paid in her own coin. Some other cases are pending which cannot fail to cause a stir in high life.

Wholesale Evictions in Wexford.
LONDON, May 4.—Wholesale evictions began this week in County Wexford, Ireland, the intention of the landlords being to eject such of the "plan of campaigners" as have weathered the financial storms consequent upon the Parnell difficulty. The decrees of expulsion have been signed by Lords Curlew, Templemore, Rathven, Ely and Monck, Colonel Tottenham and 15 others.

A Lover's Jealousy.
VIENNA, May 4.—A coachman named Schimatulla at Neustadt, near Vienna, suspected a laborer named Naproalla of courtship his fiancée, Fraulain Knapnitz. He played detective and discovered the pair a few evenings ago hiding in a forage house and exchanging loving caresses. Schimatulla quietly fastened the door so that the couple could not get out. He then set fire to the building and the victims of his hate perished amid the flames. The people attracted to the spot found Schimatulla hanging dead from a rafter of an adjacent coach house, having committed suicide.

BEATRIX RANDOLPH

CHAPTER II.

HOW LOVELY AND UNFORTUNATE SHE
WAS.

"MUSIC IS A SACRED THING, MY CHILD,"
HE WOULD OFTEN SAY TO HER.

What is more worthy the contemplation of a humane mind than the spectacle of a pretty young woman? It is the least selfish of all pleasures. By learning we seek to elevate ourselves above our fellows; by philosophy, to console ourselves for the past and to fortify our-person. It is fitting, therefore, to consider not so much the loss sustained by her seclusion, upon herself. Certainly she was of a temperament naturally inclined to solitude. She was quick to feel of all kinds, and apt and simple in her expression of them. Her proportion of the soul and the body, symmetrical and active; as she was easily and sweetly, so was she easily and easily moved. Her life, in its circumscribed conditions, by its instinctive love of largeness and herein she was helped by her generous and lively imagination. She did not read a story or watch the sun rise without engendering in her mind a thousand fresh ideas of the possibilities of existence. And her body was in such fine harmony with her spirit that you could see a stirring thought turn to roses in her cheeks, or conjure diamonds to her lovely eyes. When she came forth in the morning from her maiden chamber, having put on, let us say, a fresh, white gown, just crisp enough to whisper as she stepped, and a pink or a blue ribbon (as fancy might dictate) at her throat and hair, and her figure elastic and alert with the wholesome vigor of nineteen years, and a mouth that laughed fragrance and music, and large brown eyes, which besides being as beautiful as possible in themselves were rendered yet more so by being a few shades darker than her rippled hair and * * * * and hands that were white wonders of warm flexibility and tapering softness; when this exquisite young American girl, in short—type of the most charming and most intelligent womanhood in the world—came dawning like Aurora out of the room in which she had been dreaming visions only less lovely than herself, it did seem as if the Golden Age were now about to begin, and as if nothing false or impure were henceforward possible. She explained, without uttering a word, why the grass in spring is so deliciously green, the sky is of so tender a blue, why birds sing and water is transparent, why violets have perfume, and the sun warmth. She was the spoken secret of the universe—the interpretation of its fairest elements. By what mishap, then, was such a creature confined (as she was) to a few square miles of village land in the center of the state of New York? Was such a pearl created only to be cast before cattle, and the village grocer's son, and the hollow chested young Unitarian minister, and the innkeeper's daughters? The world could not afford it, and yet there she was, and just at the time this story begins there seemed to be rather less probability than usual of her ever getting anywhere else.

She lived with her father in a roomy, broad beamed, brown old house, envied by elm trees taller, but less antique, than itself. It was an American votedly attached. She died of typhoid fever in 1868. He was left with two children, a boy of 10 and a girl of 6. Mr. Randolph, though of a haughty and head-strong character, was not what is called thorough. He was tall and of slender build, with high shoulders, a gray mustache and imperial, and thick, wavy hair, growing rather long. His eyebrows were bushy and overhanging, and gave to his eyes a fiercer expression than might otherwise have belonged to them; he had a habit of twisting them between his thumb and finger, which looked of thought, which looked of gers, but really amour. His fingers were very his arguments and the only short thing being his temper. His general aspect was that of a retired southern brigadier whose slaves had been unrighteously made contraband. His expression was, ordinarily, profoundly serious, and he smiled rarely; but it was not difficult to make him break into a shrill, giggling laugh, which absurdly marred the severe contour of his visage and betrayed the underlying weakness.

He was fond of phrases, and had a fancy for calling himself "the most indulgent of fathers," but whenever his children transgressed the moral law of their father's good humor or indolence—and this was not seldom the case with Ed, who was as restless and independent as a hawk—he fell upon them with sweeping broadsides of rebuke, culminating, if they answered him back, in violent assertions of their total depravity. Ed was sent to school, but the study of books had no part in his scheme of existence. In the boy's seventeenth year Hamilton Jocelyn, a friend of the family, being on a visit of a few days to the Randolphs, was tickled by Ed's bearing and the story of his exploits, and offered to take him back with him to New York city for a month or so, to give him instruction in the laws and amenities of polite society.

He went off accordingly, and the month had prolonged itself to six before he came back. His father thought that he had been improved by his sojourn there. He had brought back with him certainly a great deal of entertaining talk, and gave Beatrix endless accounts of the great city, its streets, its houses, its horses, its theatres; above all, of its operas and its concerts. Both she and Ed had always been passionately devoted to music. They had understood it, by the light of nature, as it were, from a very early age, and had constantly practiced ever since. Ed's voice was not of much use, but he was an admirable performer on the violin. Beatrix, on the other hand, was above all things a singer, and her voice developed into a soprano of remarkable range and power. Her studies were not confined to church music. She knew by heart all the great operas and oratorios, and in pur-

to be called, had a small private means which rendered him in a humble way independent, and with a philosophical serenity which rarely characterizes the musical temperament he settled quietly down to be a writer on the art and science of singing.

in his singing. He never undertaken the personal pupils, though he might have derived a large income from so doing. But he was of opinion that the right to use the voice in music is given to but two or three in an age, and the chance that the training of one so gifted should fall to him was too remote to be considered. To the myriad chances of failure he preferred his comparative poverty and his peace of mind.

What arguments Jocelyn employed to woo him from his reserve cannot be known. But Mr. Randolph received a note from the professor, mentioning the day and hour of his arrival, and requesting Mr. Randolph to meet him and drive him up from the railway station alone. This was done, and on the way the professor stipulated that he should be enabled to hear Miss Randolph's voice before she was aware of his presence. "There is a train back to the city this evening, sir," he remarked, "and, if I should conclude to take it, it would be well to have spared the young lady the annoyance of an interview." The matter was readily managed. Beatrix sang with the unembarrassed freedom of supposed solitude, and the Professor listened. When the young lady had finished her selection, whatever it was, she rose from the piano and passed out through the open window of the room to the veranda. Here she was surprised by the appearance of a meager and pallid personage, of gentlemanly bearing and aspect, with a broad scar on the right side of his face and throat, and many thoughtful lines and wrinkles on his brow and around his eyes, who advanced toward her with a bow and took her hand. As she looked at him she fancied there were tears in his eyes. "Miss Randolph," he said, in a low and very pleasant voice, "I am to have the honor of being your instructor; my name is Dorimar." He said no more at that time, but raised her soft fingers to his lips, and with another bow disappeared. He did not take the evening train back to the city, but on

CHAPTER II.

WAS.

"MUSIC IS A SACRED THING, MY CHILD,"
HE WOULD OFTEN SAY TO HER.

What is more worthy the contemplation of a humane mind than the spectacle of a pretty young woman? It is the least selfish of all pleasures. By learning we seek to elevate ourselves above our fellows; by philosophy, to console ourselves for the past and to fortify ourselves for the future; by religion, as it is commonly practiced, to make ourselves respectable in this world and comfortable in the world to come. But he who stands rapt in the fascination of a girl's beauty enjoys the possession by another of what he can never have himself, admits his inferiority and generously exults in the existence of goodness for his own sake. The sole drawback is the risk he runs of falling in love—that is, of wishing to restrict to himself a blessing designed to rejoice mankind at large.

It might seem a pity that such a girl as Beatrix Randolph should be so situated as not to have it in her power to confer upon every one the unselfish gratification whereof we speak. But to be rare and difficult of access are among the conditions of mortal loveliness. In no other way, perhaps, could the heavenly aroma be preserved; and were we to become callous to beauty, as we do to pain, life would have nothing left to promise us. On the other hand, dullness is negative, delight positive, and a single day of glorious sunshine compensates for a whole blank week of lifeless landscape and leaden sky.

But Beatrix, though delightful to look upon, was not beauty in the abstract; she was first of all a distinct and concession of them. Her proportions of the soul and the body, symmetrical and active; as she smiled sweetly, so was she easily moved. Her life, its circumscribed conditions, its instinctive love of largeness, and herein she was helped by her generous and lively imagination. She did not read a story or watch the sunrise without engendering in her mind a thousand fresh ideas of the possibilities of existence. Was such a pearl created only to be cast before cattle, and the village grocer's son, and the hollow chested young Unitarian minister, and the innkeeper's daughters? The world could not afford it, and yet there she was, and just at the time this story begins there seemed to be rather less probability than usual of her ever getting anywhere else.

She lived with her father in a roomy, broad beamed, brown old house, environed by elm trees taller, but less antique, than itself. It was an American Eighteenth century house. Some hero of the Revolution had passed a night in it. It stood on the side of a low, gradual hill, and was four miles away from the nearest railway station. Altogether the region was sufficiently remote, though New York city was hardly more than three hours distant by rail. The mail arrived twice a day, and Mr. Alexander Randolph, the owner of the house and estate, received yesterday's World every forenoon, and read it during the hour preceding dinner, which always took place at 2 o'clock. It was an eminently conservative household; at all events its master was a conservative and a democrat, as his fathers had been before him.

These forefathers were of Virginian descent, and two generations ago had owned large plantations in the south. But the young Randolph of that epoch had fallen in love with a northern lady, and ended by marrying her and settling down on this estate, which was his bride's dowry.

He was originally quite wealthy, but lost money by speculations during the war. With intent to compel a better fortune he soon after ran for an office, but was defeated, as a foregone conclusion, by a crushing majority. To crown all he lost his wife, to whom he was de-gray mustache and imperial, and thick, wavy hair, growing rather long. His eyebrows were bushy and overhanging, and gave to his eyes a fiercer expression than might otherwise have belonged to them; he had a habit of twisting them between his thumb and fin thought, which looked odd, but really amours. His fingers were very long, and he was very eloquent in his arguments and the only short thing being his temper. Beatrix, on the other hand, was above all things a singer, and her voice developed into a soprano of remarkable range and power. Her studies were not confined to church music. She knew by heart all the great operas and oratorios, and in pursuance of the marked dramatic ability which she possessed she had, with Ed's assistance, acted out scenes from many of the former (so far as two performers might) on the stage of the back drawing room.

One day Hamilton Jocelyn, who had heard all the famous singers of the world in his time, attended one of these private entertainments. Contrary to expectation he turned out to be the most eulogistic auditor that Beatrix had ever had, and he wound up his praises by declaring that she must be provided with a master to bring her voice out. The most indulgent of fathers was gratified by this tribute of admiration from such a source to his favorite child, and a week or so afterward the master was sent for.

This was an elderly Englishman of respectable antecedents, who, twenty years before, had begun his musical career with what was considered the finest tenor voice of the age, and whose knowledge of the principles of music was as profound as his proficiency was remarkable. But before he had been a year on the operatic stage the theatre in which he was singing caught fire, and he was burned about the throat in such a way as forever to destroy the voice characterizes the musical temperament he settled quietly down to be a writer on the art and science of singing.

in his singing. He never undertaken the personal pupils, though he might have derived a large income from so doing. But he was of opinion that the right to use the voice in music is given to but two or three in an age, and the chance that the training of one so gifted should fall to him was too remote to be considered. To the myriad chances of failure he preferred his comparative poverty and his peace of mind.

What arguments Jocelyn employed to woo him from his reserve cannot be known. But Mr. Randolph received a note from the professor, mentioning the day and hour of his arrival, and requesting Mr. Randolph to meet him and drive him up from the railway station alone. This was done, and on the way the professor stipulated that he should be enabled to hear Miss Randolph's voice before she was aware of his presence. "There is a train back to the city this evening, sir," he remarked, "and, if I should conclude to take it, it would be well to have spared the young lady the annoyance of an interview." The matter was readily managed. Beatrix sang with the unembarrassed freedom of supposed solitude, and the Professor listened. When the young lady had finished her selection, whatever it was, she rose from the piano and passed out through the open window of the room to the veranda. Here she was surprised by the appearance of a meager and pallid personage, of gentlemanly bearing and aspect, with a broad scar on the right side of his face and throat, and many thoughtful lines and wrinkles on his brow and around his eyes, who advanced toward her with a bow and took her hand. As she looked at him she fancied there were tears in his eyes. "Miss Randolph," he said, in a low and very pleasant voice, "I am to have the honor of being your instructor; my name is Dorimar." He said no more at that time, but raised her soft fingers to his lips, and with another bow disappeared. He did not take the evening train back to the city, but on the contrary took up his abode in the Randolphs' house, and being, in addition to his musical attainments, a man of cultivation, and of a singular naive charm of character, he was nearly as much of an acquisition to Mr. Randolph as to his daughter, and they all became very good friends. As to his teaching, it was a matter between his pupil and himself, and was not often referred to outside. It seemed to afford him especial pleasure to think that Beatrix was singing for music's sake, and without any purpose of publishing or profiting by her acquirements. "Music is a sacred thing, my child," he would often say to her, "and like all sacred things it is shamefully and almost universally desecrated. It is not a mere question of voice and ear, but of purity and loftiness of soul. Great music never was greatly sung by a charlatan, or a libertine, or a fortune hunter. I, for my part, thank God that you are what you are, and that you will never be obliged to weigh your music as gold. The world may listen if it can, but you shall be free from the insult of receiving for it what it call recompense!"

Beatrix acquiesced in all this, but somewhere in her secret may have cherished the germ of Beatrix hardly knew how to understand this at the time, but afterward the words frequently revisited her memory, and may have had some influence over her at critical moments of her career.

In autumn the old Randolph homestead looked as if it were showered with gold. The great elm trees, transmuted by the touch of this Midas of the seasons, stood in a yellow glory of myriad leaves, which every breath of the cool west breeze scattered profusely eastward, where, with the still unchanged grass, they formed a spangled carpet of green and gold. The apples thronged the crooked boughs of the orchard, some like glowing rubies, others like the famous fruit of the Hesperides, though there was no guardian dragon to give them a fictitious value. The broad roof of the house itself was littered with innumerable little golden scales, of workmanship far beyond the skill of any human goldsmith, yet of absolutely no market value. What is the significance of this yearly phantasmagoria of illimitable riches, worthless because illimitable? Is it a satire or a consolation? Does it mock the poor man's indigence or cause him to hope again for competence? It comes as the guerdon of Nature, after her mighty task is done; but when she has composed herself to her wintry sleep it is trodden into the earth and forgotten, and the new year begins his labors with new sap and naked buds. It is only the human world that has to bear the burden of inheritance; and perhaps we shall never enjoy true wealth till we have learned the lesson of the trees.

Poor Mr. Randolph certainly had little else beside autumn leaves wherewith to satisfy his creditors, and the winter of his discontent was close upon him. There is a philosophy for the poor and a philosophy for the wealthy, but the philosophy that can console the debtor

But her troubles did not end with her father. There was a certain Mr. Starcher, the grocer's son; the grocer divided with the innkeeper the highest social consideration of the village. He was a young gentleman of highly respectable character and education. After leaving school he had studied for a year at a business college in New York; he was a member of the young Men's Christian association, and a person of gravity and religious convictions. A week or two after Mr. Randolph's misfortune became known he put on a suit of black clothes, relieved by a faded blue necktie, and called formally on Miss Randolph. After the first courtesies had been exchanged he said that he desired in the first place to turn the minds of Miss Randolph and her good father at ease regarding the little account between his firm and them. The money was not needed, and so far as he was concerned might remain unpaid indefinitely. "And I should like to say, too," he continued, with a manner of almost melancholy seriousness and a husky voice, "that groceries—or anything else I could get you—might be yours, permanently, if I could—you would—that you might consent to unite your life to mine. My father contemplates retiring from active business. I have never before spoken to you of this, but in seasons of trouble—we say things—and I have often thought, when we were singing in the choir together—that we might be very happy—that it was our destiny. I have been in New York and seen the great world, but you are the wife I would choose

MAI... COMES TO
the front as the best pump, and for the least money of any pump ever put on the market. They never freeze. They work easier. They will throw water faster than any other pump. They will keep a well clean by pumping out any sediment that settles to the bottom. Being constructed on right principles, they purify the water instead of spoiling it as other pumps do. If you have a well of water that tastes powdery or has any other unnatural taste try one of these pumps and if it does not correct it I will give you the pump—it will give you better water than can be got with the old oaken bucket. They never need priming, hence they are always ready to give you a part of the best water the well affords. A child can turn a well of water into a running stream. I am also offering to the public the Mathews Swing Churn, which is far superior to any other yet invented, for the following reasons:—It is the easiest to operate; it is the easiest to clean and handle; its movements are such that it allows the cream to be thoroughly aired at every oscillation of the churn and all impurities are carried off, which is very important in making gilt edge butter. They will churn as quick as any other churn and leave your butter in the best possible shape to wash and salt without removing it from the churn. Now the most essential thing in the making of good butter is pure water for the churnist tells us that 99 per cent of milk is water and to get pure water it is necessary to use the Mathews pump in preference to any other. The next most essential thing is the right kind of a churn. Now farmers we have them both, just what you need. Try one of each, if they suit you buy them. They are sold on trial and warranted in every respect. Don't buy until you see them. Me or my agents will call on you as soon as possible. Manufactured by R. W. MATHEWS, Picton, Ont. For sale by

If the farmers had access to the American markets now they would be able to make money enough to lift the mortgages on their properties.

WESTERN CHURCH.—On Sabbath morning the reception of probationers into full membership will be held, and the Superannuation fund collection taken, the pastor preaching. In the evening Rev. C. O. Johnston will preach the funeral sermon of the late Miss Emma English, when suitable music will be rendered by the choir. Last Sabbath 26 new members were received in this church 14 by letter and 12 on confession of faith, making in all 102 new members this year.

The day is coming when people will decline to be perambulating advertising mediums for merchants.

PURITY IN TROTTERING RACES.—A bill to encourage the breeding of trotting horses and to discourage dishonest tactics in connection with trotting races is before the Ontario legislature. The bill provides for the prohibition of fraudulent entries for races; that the name of the horse shall not be changed after the entry, and that any person violating any of the provisions of the act shall be guilty of an offence thereunder, and shall, on conviction before any justice of the peace, under a prosecution to commence within two years from the commission of the offence, forfeit and pay a sum not less than $50 or more than $200 for each offence, with costs, and in case of non-payment shall be liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months.

A WELL KNOWN PREACHER.—Probably the oldest and best known preacher in the Bay-Quinte counties, is the venerable Rev. David Wilson, who though not now in regular pastoral work is still hale and cheerful and his genial face is familiar to every resident of Napanee, the town where he resides.

Mr. Wilson is now 74 years of age, and began his ministerial labors in 1843—nearly half a century ago. He came to Canada from his native Scotland two years before that time, an ambitious and strong young man. He has probably preached more sermons to people along the bay than any other man in the district. There are but three other men now living in that branch of the church that were in the ministerial work so early and so long as he. These are Revs. James Gardner, D. D., Hiram Williams and James Curtis. They have all labored a great deal in these counties, but not so continuously as the genial "Father Wilson." His first circuit extended from Kingston township to Adolphustown, and included Camden as far as Centerville. Though always warmly attached to his own church and a strong advocate for its pecu-

CHANGES.—Chief Engineer Hannaford, and Supt. Vidal, of the Grand Trunk, and Messrs. E. M. Rathbun and Mr. Sherwood, of the K. N. & W., were in Napanee this week, considering certain material changes in the tracks and freight sheds of the two roads.

Too BAD.—Thursday, a young organ grinder accompanied by a bright little child with dark curly hair and winsome face, struck the town. The child seems to be used as a drawing card to secure the pennies and someone should interfere and save the child from such a roaming life.

He is still receiving large orders for the sun-beam, only $1 a dozen. Try him once, and the new light works like a charm, and he has no difficulty in securing a good picture.

THE FIRST COLLISION.—The other day a schooner in passing through the slip in the bay of Quinte bridge caught the railing of the bridge, tore away a part of it together with the stationary white light. The schooner was going too fast and did not have her sails in proper shape. This is the first collision between a vessel and the bridge.

A GENERAL FINE.—All the hotel keepers in town except one have been fined $20 each and costs for violation of the Liquor License Act during prohibited hours. The magistrate says they were let off easy this time on account of it being the first violation of this clause of the Act, but that the next time they are caught he will give them the full benefit of the law.

—We are sorry to have to chronicle the death of another of our bright young people, Miss Emma English, who died on Sunday afternoon at 5.30 o'clock, after a very long illness. For six months she has been a great sufferer having contracted a heavy cold, which settled into consumption. She bore all her sufferings with true christian courage and calmly awaited the hour of death. Her last few hours were spent in prayer and conversation with friends. The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, and after a short service held in the Western Methodist church, the choir of which she was a member, the cortege, which was a large one and included many of the leading citizens and friends of the deceased, proceeded to the cemetery where the body was buried.

IT COSTS YOU NOTHING!—It is with pleasure we announce that we have made arrangements with that popular, illustrated magazine, the AMERICAN FARMER, published at Cleveland, Ohio, and read by farmers in all parts of this country and Canada, by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay one year in advance from date, and to any new subscribers who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first class farm journal free. The AMERICAN FARMER is a large 16-page illustrated journal, of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the AMERICAN FARMER is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth three times the subscription price to you or members of your household, yet you get it FREE.
